Incredibly intelligent students. Professors are in a league of their own - world renowned in their fields and expert teachers. Education in its purest form.

AJ class 2019, RI

I am very satisfied with the experience I had at the university. Students are driven and diverse. I found the course material to be thought provoking and cutting edge. Creativity is encouraged. Courses can be incredibly challenging; some instructors are less forgiving than others. The university made a very good decision investing in the new Hopkins Student Center. I think it will make for a really inviting space for students.

MP., Master's in Communication, 2023,

Gaithersburg, MD.

I read some of the negative comments here, and frankly, they're a minute number that doesn't represent what I and thousands of others experienced while pursuing our degrees at JHU. The professors were caring and helpful and always encouraged participation and a love of learning. The Master's in Communication program is both challenging and excellent and taught me many practical skills for the workplace. Investing in a JHU education, was money well spent!

Ben, California

Everyone here is insanelyyyyy smart, and this is not an overstatement whatsoever. Everyone is extremely friendly, classes are pretty hard though. However it's only ups for hopkins here.

Lack of care for students, toxic, and outdated

1 year ago

Anonymous Blue Jay,

Massachusetts

There's an entire laundry list of reasons not to go to Hopkins - I'm a recent graduate and tell every applying high school student not to go. Not even those who are interested in premed. Here's a surface-level look of what goes on at Hopkins: Lack of care for students: - I have a friend who also graduated as a Bloomberg Scholar (a supposed full-ride). She was initially promised that the scholarship would cover her tuition, housing, and other costs associated with, well, basic living like food. After enrollment, they only gave her the money to cover tuition. The second year, the funds didn't even cover tuition fully. Hopkins is said to be one of the more generous institutions in terms of financial aid, but honestly the hoops they make students jump through for just an extra thousand dollars is insane. If this is what financial aid for students is supposed to look like, it's an abusive system. - Mental health care for students is lacking. It also doesn't help that Hopkins places the Counseling Center near the edge of the Homewood Campus, as if they were trying to avoid drawing attention to it. Luckily, I was paired up with someone who is very compassionate, but I have friends who have experienced major disruptions in their lives who were told "why aren't you studying more." Nearly every student at Hopkins has mental health issues, and Hopkins fails to support or even adequately connect students with other non-Hopkins therapists in the area to help them. - Hopkins prioritizes numbers - if you look at US News statistics, you'll see that Hopkins tries to follow it very well. US News has a page on crimes committed within the campus, including sexual assault/sexual misconduct. These cases are swept under the rug, and victims are asked not to speak about their experiences.
